1. Introduction

The European Consumer Centres Network (ECC-Net) is an EU-wide network to promote consumer confidence by advising citizens on their rights as consumers and providing easy access to redress, particularly in cases where the consumer has purchased something in a different country than his/her own (cross-border). The network has been created by merging two previously existing networks: the European Consumer Centres or 'Euroguichets', which provided information and assistance on cross-border issues; and the European Extra-Judicial Network or "EEJ-Net" which helped consumers to resolve their disputes through alternative dispute resolution schemes (ADRs) such as mediators or arbitrators.

The aim of the European Consumer Centres is to provide consumers with a wide range of services, from information on their rights to giving advice and assistance with their complaints and the resolution of disputes.

The ECC-Net is a European network consisting of 29 European Consumer Centres, in all EU Member States, plus Iceland and Norway. The Network is co-funded by the Health and Consumer Protection Directorate-General of the European Commission, the EU Member States, Norway and Iceland.

The mission of the ECC-Net is to provide information on consumer rights under EU legislation and on opportunities offered by the Single Market, in order to create consumer confidence in cross-border transactions. This is achieved by providing advice and support to individual consumers in defending their rights when dealing with business entities based in different Member States. It also aims at assisting consumers to reach an amicable resolution of cross-border disputes when needed.

The ECC-Net collects information and analyses trends on selected topics at national and EU level, on the basis of its practical experience in dealing with consumers. Thus the ECC-Net provides a highly relevant input for seminars and campaigns that are designed to educate consumers on their rights. The ECC-Net publishes information material and each ECC has its own website.

In addition, members of the ECC-Net take part in joint projects and the preparation of reports, in order to investigate specific sectors that have experienced particular cross-border difficulties.

The ECC-Net also provides feedback to the European Commission and other consumer policy makers.

The Working Group

This Joint Project on the comparison of minimum criteria for 3-star hotels in EU had, as working group, the following members:

ECC Romania - coordinator,

ECC Belgium – member of the working group and co-author of this Report,

ECC Cyprus – member of the working group,

ECC Malta – member of the working group,

ECC Portugal – member of the working group,

ECC Spain – member of the working group.

2. Objective

In 2009, the ECC-Net published a first report on "The Classification of Hotel Establishments within the EU". The report resulted from a joint project undertaken by the ECC-Net under the coordination of ECC Cyprus.

The report on "The Classification of Hotel Establishments within the EU" provides a description of the 29 systems of categorizations in the EU plus Iceland and Norway (reflecting the 29 members of the ECC-Net). It also gives useful information on facilities for disabled persons and on organizations where a consumer can file his complaint.

The description of the different systems of categorization leads to the question of how hotel ratings compare across Europe. What does a 3-star hotel really mean? Is it possible to compare the quality of a 3-star hotel between different countries? Can one expect to find the same type of quality and facilities when booking a 3-star hotel in different European countries?

Based on registered complaints, the ECC-Net has observed that the classification of hotels can be a problem to consumers when booking a hotel room in another country. In the year 2009, the ECC-Net registered 1721 complaints and information requests on accommodation services. They refer to problems with the quality of the hotel not meeting the customer's expectations, but also to other problems like contract terms.

Pre-contractual information is essential for consumers wishing to make a hotel reservation

Nowadays, consumers tend more and more to make a hotel reservation on the Internet. They book their hotel directly on the website of the hotel, on the website of a tour operator or travel agency or online hotel reservation agencies and providers. Tour operators usually give their personal rating in their brochures. One could object that this is subjective information, because rated by an interested party.

Consumers wishing to book a hotel with or without the help of an intermediary need objective and comparable data. They give their credit card details or pay in advance, but are not sure of what to expect in return.

Comparable data is important for the sector to differentiate between the different players

"Service standards may in some areas help increase the transparency and quality of the services offered, thus supporting competition, innovation, the reduction of trade barriers, as well as the protection of consumer", stated the expert group EXPRESS in its report "Standardisation for a competitive and innovative Europe: a vision for 2020", to the European Commission in February 2010.

The sector has indeed initiated and is supporting different projects to achieve better comparable data. An important initiative of this kind is the Hotelstars Union. It has been created under the patronage of HOTREC – Hotels, Restaurants & Cafés in Europe, by the hotels associations of Austria, Czech Republic, Germany, Hungary, Netherlands, Sweden and Switzerland. Their partnership resulted in a harmonised hotel classification with common criteria and procedures in the participating countries.

3. Scope

The ECC-Net decided to undertake a comparative study of the 3-star hotels in the 27 EU-countries plus Norway and Iceland under the project leadership of ECC Romania.

The purpose of the study is to provide a practical tool for consumers in search of information on which criteria a 3-star hotel has to meet in the country where they are travelling to.

The 3-star hotel category is the mean category in the classification from 1 to 5 stars. A consumer knows that a hotel in the category of 4 and 5 stars will offer a better quality and a higher level of luxury than what he will find in this practical tool. The same logical reasoning is applicable for hotels in the 1 and 2 stars category.

Each ECC has received a questionnaire with a list of minimum criteria. These criteria are not exhaustive, nor totally comparable. The systems to qualify the different classes of hotels differ from country to country. Some criteria are not represented at European level; others do appear in all the classification systems. The questionnaire contained 22 criteria on the common services and facilities (reception services, elevator, facilities for disabled persons, food services) and 19 criteria on the furnishing of the room and the bathroom.

Next to these criteria, the ECC's were asked which type of classification system is used in their member state.

The results of this comparative work done by the ECC-Net are compiled in an excel table. The consumer can choose the country he is interested in and look up which criteria are obligatory for a hotel to meet in order to be classified as a 3-star hotel.

Important notice: This tool is meant to offer guidance to consumers when they are looking for a hotel in another European country. The database is composed of data retrieved by the individual ECC's based on the information that was accessible to them. Some ECC's mentioned that the classification system would change; others said that the system is not compulsory in their country.

Therefore, we advise each consumer to check with the hotel if the criteria match his expectations before concluding a contract.

4. Classification systems for hotels in Europe

In brief, a classification system is a coded form based on an objective assessment of facilities and services provided.

In the European Union, this assessment is done by state bodies or by professional organizations. Where the state assumes responsibility for classification, grading is generally obligatory.

Grading systems set up by the hotel sector (professional associations) are generally voluntary or mandatory to their members.

Some classification systems are regionally organised, most are national. Finally, in some EU countries there is no official rating system.

All countries have adopted a star system: the higher the number of stars, the more luxurious the standard of the hotel will be, the more facilities it will have available and the more services a guest will be offered. The price will usually be higher too.

Hotel grading corresponds mostly to following comfort classes:

1 star: basic

2 stars: standard

3 stars: comfort

4 stars: first class

5 stars: luxury

Sometimes, hotels can receive a star classification with the addition of the qualification "superior". This means that the hotel is graded into its category but compared to others from the same category; it offers a superior service or appearance.

In general, the classification systems are based on criteria regarding:

- the building: reception, technical facilities like elevator, fax, Internet, common rooms for guests;
- the rooms: dimensions, furniture, sanitary facilities, technical facilities;
- the services: breakfast, restaurant, luggage service, the availability of a safe, room service;
- cleanliness and general state of maintenance.

Most of the rating systems use minimum criteria complemented with points. A hotel has to comply with the minimum criteria in order to be rated in a certain star category. The more stars in the category, the more criteria a hotel has to fulfil.

Next to the fulfilment of minimum criteria, a hotel needs to collect a minimum number of points, corresponding to its category. By complying with certain criteria which are not mandatory for its category, the hotel collects the points it needs to be graded into a certain star category.

Systems using minimum criteria plus additional points to collect, give the hotels more freedom to respond to its objectives and target group. On the other hand, it is more difficult to compare the offered services and facilities in such a rating system.

Generally, the rating systems encompass rules on the monitoring of the rated hotels. If the rating is mandatory, the monitoring will be done at regular times and will have rules on applicable sanctions.

The star ratings are also used by the hotels, the monitoring authorities or sector associations for marketing purposes.

General requirements on safety, hygiene, constructional rules, provisions for disabled persons, rules on smoking and licences for serving drinks or food are usually regulated by law and are not part of the rating system, as they are considered as being a prerequisite to open a hotel.

Though star ratings are generally used for the classification of hotels, they are sometimes used to rate other categories of accommodation too, like apart hotels, motels, guest houses, youth hostels, B&B, camping sites.

Star ratings are not in any way related to ambiance, charm or other subjective criteria. For a qualitative review, on can use other classifications or guides like "charm hotel", "Boutique hotel", "Design hotel", "Business hotel", "Chateaux et Relais" or Michelin ratings.

Hotel user ratings and guest reviews are easy to find online and give valuable additional information to the official classification.

Most of the online booking sites not only give guest reviews, but calculate satisfaction ratings, which simplifies the comparison between hotels.

5. Comparison between the different systems: main findings

Systems based on stars are commonly used in the European Union. The rating varies from 1 star to 5 stars, sometimes complemented with "superior".

no classification system; 2 minimum criteria; 10 minimum criteria plus a system of points; 17

Only in Finland and Norway no official classification system exists. You can find websites which make an assessment of the hotels, but they are based on customers' feedback and not on objective criteria.

In the other countries, most frequently national compulsory classification systems are applied. In some countries (Spain, Italy and Belgium) there is no national system, but the classification systems are regulated by the regions or autonomous provinces.

In 10 countries, the classification systems used a list of minimum criteria to rate a hotel.

Most countries (17) have a system which contains a list of minimum criteria which are supplemented with optional criteria. These optional criteria are related to points. To be classified in a certain category, the hotel has to meet the minimum criteria of the list for a certain star category and has to gain a minimum number of points by choosing a number of optional criteria. This gives the hotel the opportunity to better adapt its infrastructure and services to its target clientele (business / tourists / families / certain age categories...).

It is difficult to compare classification systems which only use minimum criteria with classification systems which use minimum criteria plus points.

Nevertheless, some tendencies can be observed.

In most of the countries
 (18), 3-star hotels need to have a permanent reception service, or at least a temporary reception service (an employee can be called outside the normal reception hours).

- 3-star hotels in (almost) all countries provide PC access, access to the internet and a safe at the reception (or other common area like the lounge).

- In 25 countries 3-star hotels have to accept a credit or debit card.
- In most of the countries (19), the employees at the reception desk of the 3-star hotel have to speak a foreign language in addition to the national language.
- In all countries, a 3-star hotel has to provide breakfast; in 17 countries it also has to provide lunch and/or dinner.
- Extra services like laundry, ironing services and parking facilities are for the most part a minimum criterion, but not as often as the other minimum criteria with respect to the common services and facilities.
- The largest rooms one will find in the criteria for 3-stars hotels are in Denmark (18 m²), Iceland, Belgium, Luxemburg and Portugal (17 m²).
- The smallest rooms in the criteria for 3-star hotels are in the United Kingdom (8.4 m^2), Slovenia (12 m^2), Slovakia (12.6 m^2), and France (13.5 m^2).
- Almost all the rooms in a 3-star hotel will have a radio and/or colour TV set with satellite or cable TV and a telephone.
- In some countries (8), it is an obligation for 3star hotels to provide air conditioning, a mini bar and a baby's cot on demand.
- In 5 countries, it is still not an obligation to be able to provide non-smoking rooms (Belgium, France, Ireland, Portugal and Slovenia). In the UK, all hotel rooms are non-smoking which is required under UK Law.
- In 10 countries, it is an obligation for 3-star hotels to be able to provide special designed rooms for disabled persons, but often this is regulated by other national legislation not related directly to hotel classification. In some countries the access to the building and the use of its facilities must be adapted to disabled persons.

- All 3-star hotels of course need to have individual bathrooms and provide shower gel and/or shampoo.

6. Advice to consumers when booking a hotel in Europe

Based on the results of this comparison of 3-star hotels in 29 European countries, the first and foremost advice to consumers looking to book a hotel is: do not rely on the star classification when you make a decision based on your experiences in your home country.

You need to check how the ratings are attributed to hotels in the country you want to travel to.

The grading of a hotel doesn't tell you anything about its location; style and décor; if it is more suited to senior citizens, young families with children or teenagers; or whether the furniture is worn out or brand new.

The criteria used for rating hotels into star categories will tell you about the facilities and services offered. The classification is principally based on quantitative criteria. For the qualitative criteria, you need to rely on other sources and they can be easily found. On the Internet, you can find a lot of websites which rate hotels. They generally also offer hotel guests the possibility to rate different aspects of the hotel they have booked and to give comments on its plus points as well as the shortcomings.

These satisfaction ratings and guest reviews, sometimes supplemented with own pictures, give a better qualitative impression than the rating.

Though they are by definition subjective, in these comments you could read something about the noise in the street or in particular rooms, the friendliness of the staff, the condition of the furniture and common areas, the location as regards the city centre or other landmarks, the beach, the business areas or other important tourist attractions.

However, as there is no external control on these guest ratings and reviews, one could argue that they can easily be falsified. That is why you should only trust ratings based on a large number of reviews and read a number of comments.

If you don't trust the Internet, you can always refer to tourist guides on sale like the well known Michelin guides, or guides on charm hotels, boutique hotels, rural hotels, etc, which are sometimes also edited by a country's tourist board.

If some aspects are of particular importance to you, do not hesitate to call or mail the hotel to confirm their presence or availability.

7. Conclusions and recommendations

Lack of comparable data

Looking at the different systems operated in the 27 EU countries, Norway and Iceland, one can only conclude that the discrepancies between the classification systems hinder consumers and businesses to compare hotels in a transparent way. Systems which only use minimum criteria are not comparable with systems using minimum criteria plus a number of points to score. Some countries have a mandatory classification scheme, others have a voluntary system. The question of who is paying for the system and who is paying for the monitoring was not included in the comparison made by the ECC-Net, but is a valid question.

Because there are differences in the hotels in different countries having the same star rating, the Belgian legislator has obliged the tour operators to give their own information on the rating of hotels, or they can be held liable of having provided possibly misleading information to their customers in case of complaints.

Obvious need of information

Consumers entering into a sales contract need transparent pre-contractual information. When they book a room online, they are not entitled to a cooling-off period and they have no right to cancel the order. If the pre-contractual information is not comprehensive enough or unclear, this might lead to unsatisfied consumers. Unhappy customers are exactly what businesses want to avoid.

Tool for marketing

A comprehensive, harmonized classification system can ensure fair competition between the players in the tourism sector. The hotel rating is an important tool in the hotels' communication and marketing efforts. Documentation issued by tourist information centres and national tourist agencies makes use of star ratings to present the available accommodation in a specific region or state.

Particularly in new tourist destinations, a harmonized rating system can defend the economic interests of the accommodation sector when negotiating contracts with international wholesale traders and tour operators.

Tourism is a key sector of the European economy.

According to DG Enterprise and Industry the EU tourism industry generates more than 5% of the EU GDP, with about 1.8 million enterprises employing around 5.2% of the total labour force (approximately 9.7 million jobs). When related sectors are taken into account, the estimated contribution of tourism to the GDP is much higher: tourism indirectly generates more than 10% of the European Union's GDP and provides employment to about 12% of the labour force.

The Lisbon Treaty acknowledges the importance of tourism. A specific article on tourism specifies that "the Union shall complement the action of the Member States in the tourism sector, in particular by promoting the competitiveness of Union undertakings in that sector".

DG Enterprise and Industry has asked key experts to make strategic recommendations regarding standardisation in Europe for the decade to come.

Experts were brought together in January 2009 in an independent group, the Expert Panel for the Review of the European Standardisation System (EXPRESS). EXPRESS delivered its report "Standardisation for a competitive and innovative Europe: a vision for 2020" to the European Commission in February 2010. This report states:

"Services constitute the main source of economic growth in Europe and their volume is large and increasing. Standards have contributed to a considerable improvement in the quality and safety of goods over the last twenty or more years. However, it is questioned whether this has been mirrored by a similar improvement in the quality and safety of services over the same period. According to a study requested by the European Parliament, standards for services are expected to give momentum to the European single market. Service standards may in some areas help increase the transparency and quality of the services offered, thus supporting competition, innovation, the reduction of trade barriers, as well as the protection of consumer interests. The creation and use of standards may become a driver for growth in some areas of the services sector and foster, especially, cross-border trade."

Scepticism in the sector

Nevertheless, the sector itself is not unanimously in favour of a harmonized rating system. In its updated position paper on the development of standards at European and international level from the 6th of November 2009, HOTREC, confederation of national associations of hotels, restaurants, cafés, and similar establishments in Europe, declares:

"The need for standardisation of services, in particular hospitality services, is not as obvious as it is for industrial goods. Hospitality services are generally custom-made and tailored to the customer. This is very different from products where, for instance, the diameter of a tap must correspond exactly to the diameter of the tube it has to adjust to. Heterogeneity is a main competitive feature for the hospitality industry. In relation to our services, diversity reflects different cultures, approaches as well as geographical situations, and constitutes one of the major attractions for customers. Most of them do not expect nor wish to find standardised conditions everywhere they travel. On the contrary, their expectations vary according to their destinations, their ages, their budgets as well as the purpose of their trips, be it a business trip or a trip for leisure. HOTREC, which is not against standards "per se", opposes top-down approaches whereby formal standards are developed at European or international level at the initiative of the EU or standardisation bodies."

Hotelstars Union: a major initiative

On the other hand, under the patronage of HOTREC, the hotels associations of Austria, Czech Republic, Germany, Hungary, Netherlands, Sweden and Switzerland have created the Hotelstars Union.

This partnership is providing a harmonised hotel classification with common criteria and procedures in the participating countries. The Hotelstars Union was set up, as declared in their website www.hotelstars.eu, to "enhance the reputation and quality of the hotel industry in the participating countries by creating transparency and security for the quests and thereby encouraging hotel marketing. The members of the Hotelstars Union take a challenging step on the road towards a European hotel classification, which started with HOTREC's seminar on hotel classification in Bergen 2004 and continued with the adoption of the 15, now "21 HOTREC principles" for the setting-up and/or review of national/regional hotel classification

The membership in the Hotelstars Union is open to other HOTREC members. The joint hotel classification is a dynamic system. Its criteria and procedures are checked regularly and developed further according to the expectations of the systems in Europe.

quests."

The Package Travel Directive (Council Directive 90/314/EEC) is one of eight directives covered by the Review of the Consumer Acquis. The current Directive is designed to protect consumers who contract package travel in the EU. Package travel is defined as the pre-arranged combination of not fewer than two tourist services.

The travel sector has evolved considerably in recent years: the development of the internet, the entry of low cost air carriers, the growth within the cruise industry and the increasing trend of consumers putting together their own holiday components from different organisers, instead of opting for packages pre-arranged by an organiser or a retailer.

That is why a majority of stakeholders is asking for a widening of the scope of the Directive to include "dynamic packages", as was clearly mentioned during the hearing organized by the European Commission on 22 April 2010. The aim of the workshop was to discuss the policy options which have been identified during the revision process.

This option of including dynamic packages was also strongly supported by BEUC, the organisation representing the opinion of consumer organizations in Europe.

The importance of information

The Directive provides rules on the information that must be given to consumers at different points in time. It contains specific requirements with regard to the content of brochures, where these are issued. For example, any brochure made available to consumers must indicate clearly and accurately the price, destination, itinerary and the means of transport used, type of accommodation, meal plan, passport and visa requirements, target group of the package, etc.

This information must not be misleading and is binding on the organiser/retailer.

The European Commission had also organised an expert group on the round table on package travel contracts and adopted its conclusions on the 13th of February 2001. One of these conclusions was that "The information should not only indicate the destination, but also include an adequate description of the package on the basis of which the consumer can decide whether the package is likely to suit his expectations and whether he is able to go on the package. "

Objective and clear information on the quality standards a hotel offers is part of this adequate description on the basis of which the consumer can decide whether the hotel is likely to suit his expectations.

The right time to act

A harmonised classification system for hotels and other holiday accommodation should be taken into account with the review of the Directive. Moreover, such a system is not only useful within the possible widened scope of the future Package Travel Directive, but it is also an important tool for consumers booking a hotel not being a part of a package, regardless if they book directly with the hotel or via a tour operator, a travel agent, an online booking agency or any other provider.

A specific demand of the European Parliament

In its resolution of 29 November 2007 on a renewed EU Tourism Policy: Towards a stronger partnership for European Tourism, the European Parliament draws special attention to the harmonisation of quality standards for tourist accommodation in Europe:

"19. Notes the multiplicity of classification schemes in the Member States and considers that this situation, from the point of view of the consumer, has a negative impact on the industry's reliability and on transparency;

- 20. Notes that consumers regard the system of classification as an important instrument for choosing a hotel or other accommodation; therefore considers it important that accurate information on the meaning of the classification in the different countries be easily available to consumers and that it take their needs into close consideration;
- 21. Considers it advisable and possible to establish a common ground and common criteria for customers in order that they be able to make a choice, on the basis of clear and verifiable classification criteria, when they decide to travel abroad;
- 22. Notes, in this respect, that, given the great number of criteria in certain national and regional systems, the simplification of current standards would achieve the aim of clarifying and facilitating information for the consumer and would also ensure better levels of transparency with regard to tourist accommodation;
- 23. Calls on the European hospitality industry to:
- continue its benchmarking of the key aspects of the various classification systems and pursue its efforts to bring these systems closer to one another, without disruption to existing systems, which would be to the detriment of consumers and of industry;
- pursue its efforts to facilitate the understanding of the meaning of "stars" in the different Member States;
- inform regularly the Community institutions of progress made;
- 24. Calls on local, regional and national authorities, whenever making a contribution to systems of classification, to support, within the framework of proper public/private partnerships, the current work of the European hospitality industry in relation to both the transparency and approximation, via benchmarking, of the existing classification systems;
- 25. Is aware that a common classification system at EU level would be very difficult to achieve given the variety of hotel types and tourist accommodation as a result of local requirements, cultures and sensitivities, and in view of the very different structures of current classification plans;

- 26. Considers, however, that a set of guidelines based on common and uniform criteria for the entire EU could take into account the interests of the consumer, while respecting the environment and local characteristics;
- 27. Calls on the Commission, in cooperation with European hotel and catering organisations, such as HOTREC (Hotels, Restaurants and Cafés in Europe), and with the European consumer protection organisations, to establish a methodology for creating such minimum standards on safety and quality of accommodation services; stresses that such a methodology could include the introduction of an EC mark for accommodation that would encompass pan-European common criteria providing consumers with an assurance as to the minimum level of quality to be expected whatever Member State is visited;"

The ultimate classification system

To be an efficient information tool, a classification system should

- be based on objective factors
- be comprehensive but relevant
- be comparable
- be clear and unambiguous
- be set up in cooperation with the sector, consumer associations and authorities
- be flexible and adaptable to new developments
- respond to the information needs of consumers
- respond to the marketing needs of businesses
- stimulate competition and innovation

- respond to the regulatory needs of authorities (allow effective monitoring)
- consider customers with special needs, e.g. families with small children, elderly people, disabled persons, etc.
- respond to customers with specific demands, e.g. people on a business trip, tourists, students, singles, etc.
- be monitored on a regular basis by an independent body

However, some criteria are difficult to catch into a rating system although they can be of major importance. This is the case with most of the more qualitative criteria: the character of a hotel, its location, how it is maintained, the peacefulness or the liveliness of the hotel or its surroundings, the attention paid to environmental or health issues; the little attentions that make a big difference.

These aspects are narrowly tied to the target clientele of the hotel. Hotels should give information on their regular patrons, to avoid that an elderly couple looking for a cosy and quiet hotel ends up in a hotel aimed at youngsters partying all day and night. The same goes for the opposite situation.

With the growing importance of hotel chains in the European market (26%), one can expect that the offer of hotels will be more uniform. The big hotel chains impose their own qualitative and quantitative criteria; they conduct quality controls and provide training. Though we are far away from the situation in the US market, where about 70% of the hotels are part of a hotel chain, the increase of their importance on the European market will introduce more predictability, but also more uniformity. At present though, regional differences and local characteristics are often still high on consumers' level of expectation.

Conclusion

By way of conclusion, this commentary from Michael Nowlis, Managing Director of Tourism Control Intelligence, who has rated hospitality establishments for various guides and trained AAA inspectors, is particularly relevant:

"In a seamless Europe where holidaymakers can travel from Finland to Portugal without ever stopping at a border and use a single currency along the way, the lack of coherence in hotel classification is an embarrassment to the tourism industry."

5. GENERAL REMARKS

Registration And Classification

Fáilte Ireland is the body responsible for ensuring that accommodation standards meet visitor needs. It carries out this function by setting the requirements for the various categories of accommodation and through processes for the regular monitoring of the standards in all forms of approved accommodation.

Under the Tourist Traffic Acts 1939-2003, Fáilte Ireland has specific powers and functions in relation to the registration and grading of tourist accommodation. The registration and classification responsibilities of Fáilte Ireland cover accommodation legislation, monitoring of product quality, customer relations and in particular the management of appointed sub-contractors for the inspection and registration assessment of various accommodation categories.

Fáilte Ireland is committed to developing and implementing a number of quality assurance schemes to provide assurance to visitors and encourage higher standards of product amongst the industry in Ireland.

Mandatory Hotel Classification Scheme

The Fáilte Ireland Hotel Classification Scheme is a mandatory scheme on which all hotels, being classified, must attain the One star minimum entry level requirements in order to comply with the Registration and Renewal of Registration Regulations fot Hotels 2003. The scheme was developed in close consultation with the Irish Hotels Federation (IHF), and incorporates all star rated categories and has a point scoring system, which endeavours to meet and exceed consumer expectations.

4. OTHER
Special designed rooms for disabled people	No	Tourism regulations do not require the provision of specially designed rooms but as in point 1.3 above, new developments are vetted by KNPD. One specification is that any building offering accomodation to the public should have at least one guest bedroom for every 20 (or part thereof) that are suitable, in terms of dimensions and layout, for use by persons using a wheelchair.

5. GENERAL REMARKS

3 star accomodation can mean 3 star hotel, 3 star hotel self-catering unit, 3 star aparthotel or 3 star tourist village. Requirements are generally equivalent with slight exceptions. For example the floor area for a self catering unit is larger than for regular guest bedrooms.

5. GENERAL REMARKS

Hotels have to comply with the basic standards prescribed for the rooms and service conditions and quality aspects that must be available in a hotel in that specific category. Each category has its own basic standards. All hotels which offer a 3 star accommodation must comply with all basic standards that apply to a 3 star category in order to be classified under that specific category. Then there are also optional standards. This works with a system of points. A minimum number of points must be reached for each category by meeting several optional standards. There is flexibility because there is a free choice from the available number of optional standards. So the hotel can also differentiate itself from other hotels within the same category.

ECC Country	Norway
Is the classification system in your country based on minimum criteria only?	No	There is no a standardised classification system in Norway. Nonetheless, NHO (Confederation of Norwegian Enterprise) has developed a new system that also takes into account guests' evaluations of their stay at a hotel, but this is not obligatory.
Is the classification system in your country based on minimum criteria plus a system of points?	No	Generally, a 3-start hotel in Norway is expected to have the following: good standard, TV, phone, own bathroom with shower and serving of meals.
Other type of classification?	No

5. GENERAL REMARKS

Answers to the questions in the questionnaire are based on information taken from a survey conducted by www.hotelklassifisering.no. Given that no standardised hotel classification system exists in Norway and that participation in classification surveys is voluntary, many hotels do not participate in classification surveys. This makes it very difficult to ascertain actual quality of indvidual hotels across the country, and raises questions about both reliability and validity of such surveys.
